ABOUT THE EVENT

The speaker, Professor Yu Keping, will make a general observation of the dominant processes and breakthrough points of China's political reforms towards democratic governance over the last 35 years since the Reform. His speech will summarize the major achievements and the ongoing challenges of China's democratic governance. It will offer a brief analysis and reflection of the underlying reasons for these reforms and the main characteristics of China's governance model. He also will talk about the recent political development under the leadership of President Xi Jinping, and explain what does the "New Normal" mean in term of Chinese politics and what is the meaning of modernizing the state governance system and the state's governing capacity as the general goal of further reform by 2020.
